This week, we highlight the BBC's piece Is This a Truly Robot-proof Job. This article discusses the possible presence of artificial intelligence on a company's board. In a survey of 800 executives conducted by World Economic Forum's Global Agenda Council on the Future of Software and Society, 45% expected an artificial intelligence machine will sit on a company's board of directors by the year 2025. Nevertheless, the author argues why she is part of the other 55%.
